

Kinderdijk

Those who like windmills continue on.....

We leave from next to the Erasmus Bridge in Rotterdam

One gets to Kinderdijk by taking a big waterbus and then a smaller one --- this one.

Stanley Gedzelman, my friend, the meteorologist, will appreciate this one.

You should see the sketch Addie produced in a few minutes.

This map shows the approximately 15 windmills at one location...amazing!

There they are in a row, Kinderdijk is an UNESCO site for good reason

Five in a row and the reflections too.....

This has a triangular bottom.

I don't add much to the scenery!

The machinery that moves the water up and down.

This bus brought us directly back to the train that returned us to Delft.
Holland's public transit is very impressive.
